Elevators and Escalators are the focal point of a building. This is because buildings are designed around these systems to move people and material reliably and safely. Most importantly, tenants, passengers, and visitors base their perception of building quality on these systems appearance and performance. This is why it is so important to involve CEC in your building's conversation about elevators and escalators. Our firm works closely with our Clients and Elevator Contractors, in return, we find it to be most productive to work together. By bringing parties together, along with CEC's industry knowledge and relationships, we provide the best possible solution for our Clients.
